

appears to us as a demand of the cosmos is not annihilation but the spiritualization of the human being.

In this, Anthroposophy and its spiritual understanding of the human being and the world are of urgent significance, current, and more necessary than ever for the salvation and healing of the earth.²² It is a matter of taking practical steps on a large scale but also locally—as well as undertaking essential “deeds of the ‘I’” in the midst of a difficult and decidedly complex crisis.
